MARRIAGE.

At Singapore, on the 23rd, SCOTTIE TUNNARD, of New York, U.S.A., to MARGARET MASON DOUGLAS, of Canada. No cards. (1132)

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, JULY 27th, 1876.

The Mission to Burma, of which Sir DOUGLAS FORBES was the guiding spirit, has managed to arrange matters amicably with the King, but the text of the agreement which has been signed may be taken to signify the net result of his negotiations it is certainly a most unsatisfactory one. In fact the frontier difficulty seems to be the only matter settled, as the words of the agreement run: "It is hereby agreed between the British and Burmese Governments that the State of Western Karense shall remain separate and independent, and that no Sovereignty or Governmental Authority of any description shall be claimed or exercised over that State." So far good, but nothing whatever is mentioned in the document concerning the visit of the Chinese General, LEE-TSE-TAI, the murder of Mr. MARGARET, or the granting of a free passage through the King's dominions to a second exploring expedition. For our own part we have never had much doubt concerning the treacherous tyrant's complicity in the attack on Colonel BROWN's party. He may not have desired them to be murdered, but he probably would have been glad to see them thoroughly frightened and induced to give up their undertaking. There is not a word said about the King giving permission for British troops to proceed through Burma to Yunnan, to punish the people of that province, if necessary. A later telegram from Allahabad states that on the contrary the King has refused to allow the troops a passage through his territories in case of need.

It is reported by the Mountain Advertiser that Sir DOUGLAS FORBES and his suite at their interview with the King appeared in his presence without their boots. If this be true the result of the Mission need not surprise any one. When a representative of the Queen of Great Britain and Empress of India submits to such a humiliation as to take off his boots to approach a petty tyrant like the King of BURMA, who is really an unwilling tributary and vassal to the Emperor of CHINA, it is not to be wondered at that he signs a treaty which settles only one of the questions in dispute. But Sir DOUGLAS FORBES not only degraded himself; he, as the representative of the British Government, dishonoured his country. It is scarcely conceivable that an Englishman could be found who would be guilty of such an act. It is an outrage on our civilization, and is calculated to seriously damage our prestige in the East. We will hope, for the credit of England, that the report is false. If, however, it should unfortunately prove correct, we trust that Sir DOUGLAS FORBES will meet with a stern rebuke for this most uncalculated and unseemly concession to the vain and arrogant Lord of the White Elephant. A more unnecessary piece of servility could not be imagined. England has, and can have, nothing to fear from the King of BURMA. In fact the exact reverse is the case. He has everything to fear, in case of a rupture, from the British Indian Government. It is, therefore, most intolerable that a weak-minded man should thus voluntarily abase his country in the eyes of this assuming Prince. Now that a representative of our Majesty has appeared before a vassal of the Chinese Empire, her statesman will require some unheeded act of subservience from British Ambassadors when admitted to the presence of the occupant of the Dragon Throne.A telegram from Rangoon announces that the result of the Mission has given great satisfaction to the more than community of British Burma. This is not to be wondered at. It would be marvellous if it had had any other result. Sir DOUGLAS FORBES ought to have insisted on a full explanation with regard to the visit of General LEE-TSE-TAI. This he may have done, and it is to be hoped he has. Then he should have demanded a free and unopposed passage through Burma for a new Burmo-Chinese Expedition, with an armed escort. Also for leave for an army to proceed through his dominions to operate against the people of Yunnan, in the event of the British representatives failing to obtain full satisfaction from other quarters. These demands have been made, and, apparently, refused. Sir DOUGLAS FORBES ought not to have concluded any agreement from which they were omitted. It has been believed, all along, that these conditions would be peremptorily exacted. It is greatly to be regretted that they have not. The Karense question is for the present settled, and Sir DOUGLAS FORBES has returned, playing himself, no doubt, on his "amiable settlement" of that difficulty. But the people of England will not be content. The Yunnan outrage has excited strong indignation there both against China and Burma, and the prevalent belief is that the King of the latter country was concerned in it. He has denied it in lo, and our credulous officials of course, as a matter of courtesy, believe his affirmation. We suppose Sir DOUGLAS FORBES pulled off his boots as a matter of courtesy also. There is too much done in courtesy in these days. The result is a series of bungles and mistakes, provocative of disappointment and annoyance to British subjects, and the sources, probably, of future complications not so easily settled.

At the Police Court yesterday, a Chinaman applied for a summons against his master for looking angrily at him. Judging from the story of the application his master probably had good reason for his hostile manifestation of displeasure.
